U.S. News & World Report Law School Rankings: 2013 to 2014 Color-Coded Changes for All Reported Law School Statistics

The following table provides the USN&WR law school rankings statistics for 2013 and 2014, with color coding to help visualize what changed for each school: green for positive changes, red for negative changes, yellow for no change, and no color for N/A (Not Available or Not Applicable - see below).

Note that for acceptance rates and student/faculty ratio, an increase in the reported figure is negative and coded red, and a decrease is positive and coded green (i.e., we all want a lower student/faculty ratio and we all want to be more exclusive and admit a smaller percentage of our applicants; I also did the math to reflect this - a "+ 3%" change in acceptance rate means it decreased by three percent, thus was better, and so is coded green. Sorry if that is confusing.)

USN&WR publishes the 25th and 75th percentile numbers for LSAT and UGPA, but doesn't publish the median of those statistics that they actually use to rank schools; the median LSAT and UGPA below are from the ABA.

In the table, N/A means "Not available" if the school submitted no data for an item, or "Not Applicable" for the change in ranking if a school only moved around in the "Tier 2" rankings, or if the math involved an N/A cell. And for Tier 2 schools, they are all considered #148 for purposes of calculating any movement in or out of the Second Tier from 2013 to 2014.

And the schools are in order of the Spring 2014 ranking.
